For the event, Professor Anna invited journalist Renata Maria Gogol from Poland, to share her stories through a speech. After a brief introduction by the professor, Renata Maria Gogol began her speech. First, she analyzed the impact and positioning of today's media in this globalized society, as well as the transition between traditional and emerging media generations. She also posed many open-ended questions for students to reflect upon. After helping students understand the role of media, Renata Maria Gogol shared memorable and interesting experiences from her career as a journalist, including her experiences reporting in countries such as the United States, the Arab world, and Iran. These firsthand experiences provided valuable and authentic inspiration for the students.

Following that, Renata Maria Gogol distributed prepared English newspapers and asked students to select an article to share with everyone. The students then expressed their individual reasons for choosing a particular article, their thoughts on it, and any inspiration they gained from it. Afterwards, Ms. Renata asked students to condense the article to about 8 sentences, providing clear information about the people, time, and place. Students were then asked to imagine themselves as real journalists and report the condensed article.

Renata Maria Gogol also shared the benefits she believes come with being a journalist. She mentioned that being a journalist allows her to meet interesting people, witness impressive things, and visit many countries. She expressed that one of the most memorable interviews for her was with a family in Iran. She hopes that more people will be willing to enter the media/ journalism industry.
